Left Him No Escape.
"If you feel that way, why did you propose to the woman?"
"I didn't. She proposed to me."
"But you could have refused her."
"No, I couldn't. She said 'I'll marry me.' Have you any objection?"
"So whether I'd said 'Yes' or 'No,' she had me either way."
"Well, you shouldn't have answered her."
"I didn't," she said. "Silence gives consent," and that settled it."

Ramsey Milholland

by Booth Tarkington

CHAPTER X.

Ramsey kept very few things from Fred Mitchell, and usually his confidences were immediate upon the occasion of them; but allowed several weeks to elapse before sketching for his roommate the outlines of this adventure.

"One thing that was kind of funny about it, Fred," he said, "I didn't know what to call her."

Mr. Mitchell, stretched upon the window seat in their study, and looking out over the town street below and the campus beyond the street, had already thought it tactful to ambush his profound amusement by turning upon his side, so that his face was toward the window and away from his companion. "What did you want to call her?" he inquired in a serious voice. "Names?"

"No. You know what I mean. I mean I had to keep calling her 'you'; and that gets kind of freaky when you're talking to anybody a good while like that. When she'd be looking away from me, for instance, or down at the river, or somewhere, and I'd want to start saying something to her, you know, why, I wouldn't know how to get started exactly, without calling her something. A person doesn't want to be always starting off with 'See here, or things like that.'"

"I don't see why you let it trouble you," said Fred. "From how you've always talked about her, you had a perfectly handy way to start off with anything you wanted to say to her."

"What with?"

"Why didn't you just say, 'Oh, you Teacher's Pet!' That would—"

"Get out! What I mean is, she called me 'Ramsey' without any bother; it seems funny I got stumped every time I started to say 'Dora.' Some way I couldn't land it, and it certainly would 'a' sounded crazy to call her 'Miss Yocum' after sitting in the same room with her every day, from the baby class clear on up through the end of high school. That would 'a' made me out an idiot!"

"What did you call her?" Fred asked.

"Just nothing at all. I started to call her something or other a hundred times, I guess, and then I'd balk. I'd get all ready, and kind of make a sort of a sound, and then I'd have to quit."

"She may have thought you had a cold," said Fred, still keeping his back turned.

"I expect maybe she did—though I don't know; most the time she didn't seem to notice me much, kind of."

"She didn't?"

"No. She was too upset, I guess, by what she was thinking about."

"But if it hadn't been for that," Fred suggested, "you mean she'd have certainly paid more attention to who was sitting on the bench with her?"

"Get out! You know how it was. Everybody these few days thought we were going to have war, and she was just sure of it, and it upset her. Of course most people were a lot more upset by what those Dutchmen did to the Lusitania than by the idea of war; and she seemed to feed as broken up as anybody could be about the Lusitania, but what got her this worst was the notion of her country wanting to fight."

She said. She really was upset, too, Fred; there wasn't no outlet for it about it. I guess that old girl certainly must have a good deal of feeling; because, dogged, after we'd been sitting there a while if she didn't have to get out her handkerchief! She kept her face turned away from me—just the same as you're doing now to keep from laughing—but honestly, she cried like somebody at a funeral. I felt like the darndest fool!"

"I'm not laughing," said Fred, but he did not prove it by turning so that his face could be seen. "What'd she say?"

"Oh, she didn't say such an awful lot. She said one kind of funny thing though: she said she was sorry she couldn't quite control herself, but if anybody had to see her cry she minded it less because it was an old school-mate. What struck me so kind of funny about that is—why, it looks as if she never knew the way I always hated her so."

"Yes," said Fred. "It wasn't flattering!"

"Well, sir, it isn't kind of," Ramsey agreed, musingly. "It certainly isn't when you look at it that way."

"What did you say when she said that?" Fred asked.

"Nothing. I started to, but I sort of balked again. Well, we kept on sitting there, and after while she began to talk again and got kind of excited about how no war could do anything or anybody any good, and all war was wicked, no matter what it was about, and nothing could be good that was founded on fear and hate, and every war that ever was fought was always founded on fear and hate. She said if the Germans wanted to fight us we ought to go to meet them and tell them we wouldn't fight."

"What did you say?"

"Nothing. I kind of started to—but what's the use? She's got that in her head. Besides, how are you going to argue about a thing with a person that's crying about it? I tell you, Fred, I guess we got to admit, after all, that old girl certainly must have a lot of heart about her, anyway. There may not be much fun to her—though of course I wouldn't know hardly any way to tell about that—but there couldn't be hardly any doubt she's got a lot of feeling. Well, and then she went on and said old men made wars, but didn't fight; they left the fighting to the boys, and the suffering to the boys' mothers."

"Yes!" Fred exclaimed, and upon that he turned, free of mirth for the moment. "That's the woman of it, I guess. Send the old men to do the fighting! For the matter of that, I guess my father'd about a thousand times rather go himself than see me and my brothers go; but Father's so fat he can't stoop! You got to be able to stoop to dig a trench, I guess! Well, suppose we sent our old men up against those Dutchmen; the Dutchmen would just kill the old men, and then come after the boys anyway, and the boys wouldn't be ready, and they'd get killed, too; and then there wouldn't be anybody but the Dutchmen left, and that'd be one fine world, wouldn't it?"

"Yes," said Ramsey. "Course I thought of that."

"Did you tell her?"

"No."

"What did you say?"

"Nothing. I couldn't get started any way, but, besides, what was the use? But she didn't want the old men to go; she didn't want anybody to go."

"What did she want the country to do?" Fred asked, impatiently.

"Just what it has been doing, I suppose. Just let things simmer down,

"No, I Started To, but—Shut Up!"

and poke along, and let them do what they like to us."

"I guess so!" said Fred. "Then, afterwards, when they got some free time on their hands, they'll come over and make it really interesting for us, because they know we won't do anything but talk. Yes, I guess the way things are settling down ought to suit Dora. There isn't going to be any war."

"She was pretty sure there was, though," Ramsey said, thoughtfully.

"Oh, of course she was then. We all thought so those few days."

"No. She said she thought it probably wouldn't come right away, but now it was almost sure to come sometime. She said our telegrams and all the talk and so much feeling and everything showed her that the war thought that was always in people somewhere had been stirred up so it would go on and on. She said she knew from the way she felt herself about the Lusitania that a feeling like that in her would never be absolutely wiped out as long as she lived. But she said her own feeling about the horrorfulness of war taught her to keep the first feeling from breaking out, but with other people it wouldn't, and even if war didn't break out right then, it would always be ready to, all over the country, and sometime it would, though she was going to do her share to fight it, herself, as long as she could stand. She asked me wouldn't I be one of the ones to help her."

He paused, and after a moment Fred asked, "Well? What did you say to that?"

"Nothing. I started to, but—"

Again Fred thought it tactful to turn and look out the window, while the agitation of his shoulders betrayed him.

"Go on and laugh! Well, so we stayed there quite a while, but before we left she got kind of more like everyday, you know, the way people do. It was half-past nine when we walked back to town, and I was commencing to feel kind of hungry, so I asked her if she wasn't, and she sort of laughed and seemed to be ashamed of it, as if it was a disgrace or something, but she said she guessed she was; so I left her by that hedge of lilacs near the observatory and went on over to the Teria and the fruit store, and got some stuffed eggs and olives and half-a-dozen peanut butter sandwiches and a box of strawberries—kind of girl-food, you know—and went on back there, and we ate the stuff up. So then she said she was afraid she'd taken me away from my dinner and made me a lot of trouble, and so on, and she was sorry, and she told me good-night."

"What did you say then?"

"Nothing. Oh, shut up! So then she skipped out to her dorm, and I came on home."

"When did you see her next, Ramsey?"

"I haven't seen her next," said Ramsey. "I haven't seen her at all—not to speak to. I saw her on Main street twice since then, but both times she was with some other girls, and they were across the street, and I couldn't tell if she was looking at me—I kind of thought not—I thought it might look sort of nutty to bow to her if she wasn't, so I didn't."

"And you didn't tell her you wouldn't be one of the ones to help her with her pacifism and anti-war stuff and all that?"

"No. I started to, but—Shut up!"

Fred sat up, giggling. "So she thinks you will help her. You didn't say anything at all, and she must think that means she converted you. Why didn't you speak up?"

"Well, I wouldn't argue with her," said Ramsey. "Then, after a silence, he seemed to be in need of sympathetic comprehension. 'It was kind of funny though, wasn't it?'" he said, appealingly.

"What was?"

"The whole business."

"What whole business?"

"Oh, get out! Her stopping me, and me going 'pokin' along with her, and her—well, her crying and everything, and me being around with her while she felt so upset, I mean. It seems—well, it does seem all kind of funny to me."

"Why does it?" Fred inquired, preserving his gravity. "Why should it seem funny to you?"

"I don't mean funny like something's funny you laugh at," Ramsey explained laboriously. "I mean funny like something that's out of the way, and you wonder how it ever happened to happen. I mean it seems funny I'd ever be sitting there on a bench with that old girl I never spoke to in my life or had anything to do with, and talking about the United States going to war. What we were talking about, why, that seems just as funny as the rest of it. Looking back to our class picnic, I'll instance, second year of high school, that day I jumped in the creek after—well, you know, it was when I started making a fool of myself over a girl. Thank goodness, I got that out of my system; it makes me just sick to look back on those days and think of the fool things I did, and all I thought about that girl. Why, she—well, I've got old enough to see now she was just about as ordinary a girl as there ever was, and if I saw her now I wouldn't even think she was pretty; I'd probably think she was sort of loud-looking. Well, what's passed is past, and it isn't either here nor there. What I started to say was this: that the way it begins to look to me, it looks as if nobody can tell in this life a darn thing about what's going to happen, and the things that do happen are the very ones you'd swear were the last that could. I mean—you look back to that day of the picnic—myself but I was a rube then—well, I mean you look back to that day, and what do you suppose I'd have thought then if somebody'd told me the time would ever come when I'd be 'way off here in college sitting on a bench with Dora Yocum—with Dora Yocum, in the first place—and her crying and all that of us talking about the United States going to war with Germany! Don't it seem pretty funny to you, Fred, too?"

"But as near as I can make out," Fred said, "that isn't what happened."

"Why isn't it?"

"You say 'and both of us talking' and so on. As near as I can make out, you didn't say anything at all."

"Well, I didn't—much," Ramsey admitted, and returned to his point with almost pathetic persistence. "But doesn't it seem kind of funny to you, Fred?"

"Well, I don't know."

"It does to me," Ramsey insisted. "It certainly does to me."

"Yes," said Fred cruelly. "I've noticed you said so, but it don't look any funnier than you do when you say it."

Suddenly he sent forth a startling shout. "Wow! You're as red as a blushing beet!"

"I am not!"

"Yare!" shouted Fred. "Wow! This old woman-hater's got the flushes. Oh, look at the pretty pony!"

Companion to the Goodyear All-Weather Tread

By long wear, superior traction, freedom from skidding, and ultimate economy, the Goodyear All-Weather Tread has won unquestioned leadership.

As a companion to this tire there is the Goodyear 30 x 3½ Cross-Rib Fabric.

Built of the same high grade Egyptian fabric and with a long wearing but differently designed tread, this tire offers unusual value.

Over 5,000,000 of these tires have been sold in the last five years.

Their quality and serviceability have proven to thousands of motorists the folly of buying unknown and unguaranteed tires of lower price.

SUNDAY SERVICES:
 Sunday School 9:45
 Morning Service 11:00
 Epworth League 7:00
 Evening Service 7:45

Next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock is communion. Let every follower of Christ remember that Christ definitely commands that all shall take part in this service. No Christian should ever be absent from the Lord's table if it is at all possible to be present.

Our Sunday school was pleased to receive a visit from the Palatine troop of Boy Scouts last Sunday under the direction of the Reverend S. E. Pollock, former pastor here, and their Scoutmaster, Mr. Herman.

Everybody will take dinner and supper at the bazaar in the church basement today (Thursday).

The pastor is announcing a special book sale at the bazaar. The books consist of a very special selection of only the very best, such as are specially adapted to help in the religious life and make stronger and richer and more beautiful character. The profit on the books is very slight, but that little profit does not go to any individual, but will be used to pay for other religious literature, specially leaflets, for free distribution. Do not forget the book table at the bazaar.

Last Sunday morning a religious survey of Antioch and vicinity was given which threw much light on general conditions, affording a basis for more intelligent effort in the task of making the community wholly Christian.

Sunday evening was devoted to a brief study of the religious conditions of the continent of Africa. It was shown that Africa is four times as large as the United States, has a population of from 150 to 175 millions, and probably not much, if any, over three millions actually Christian, though it is credited by some with ten million Christians. Three millions out of 175 millions seems a small fraction, only one in fifty-eight. The great mass of the population of the great continent of Africa is pagan and Mohammedan. The work of the missionaries in recent years was shown to be much more highly successful than ever before, and the rapidity of the increase in the number of Christians to be limited now only by lack of greater resources to enlarge the work more rapidly.

The bazaar in the church basement today (Thursday) and this evening promises to be one of the best ever held here. The variety of things on sale is large and the "cats" will be abundant and of excellent quality. The bazaar will be a good place to meet friends and have a good visit.

It is being remarked by many that a larger number of the summer people from Chicago this year are attending church services on Sunday, which means that gradually a better class of people are coming out. All summer people are gladly welcomed to all the services, that they may keep up their religious life to normal and at the same time help to encourage the work of God locally.

St. Ignatius' Church News

Regular services: Holy communion, 7 a. m., except 3d Sunday; church school, 8:45 a. m.; morning prayer, 10; holy communion, 3d, 10 a. m.

In spite of the heat of last Sunday the attendance was fairly good and everyone enjoyed the solo that was given by Mrs. William Krencher, of Lake Catherine.

Father Batty came from Libertyville and arrived in plenty of time for the early service in spite of the rain of the night before.

Next Sunday is the seventh Sunday after trinity, and all the services will be held at the regular time. Holy communion, church school, and morning prayer as per the above schedule.

During the summer the church school is not being attended as well as it ought to be, and the attention of the parents, teachers and scholars is called to this fact. We need much more faithfulness and regularity on the part of all. The church school is part of the whole work of the church, and we cannot afford to let it suffer, because it trains the future members of the church. If you are a parent, teacher, or scholar, will you not feel your responsibilities a little more heavily, and do your utmost to make this part of the church work more beneficial to the whole community?

Last week a very successful card party was held at Winch's. Chancel Lake pavilion, and a very good time was had by all.

On Wednesday of this week an all day meeting of the Ladies' Guild is being held at the home of Mrs. Evan Kaye. As the bazaar is approaching and will soon be here, it is most important that there should be a good attendance at these meetings.

If you have company over week ends, bring your company to church with you. You will be proud of your church and they will be pleased with it. Remember the early service at 7 in the morning. That is the best time to worship God, in the quiet and cool of the early morning.

"And It Cannot Warp"

Made from rock, encased in a heavy protective covering, Sheetrock takes any decorative treatment. It can be papered, painted or paneled.

And Sheetrock is fireproof. It cannot warp, shrink or buckle. It protects the building. An insulator of heat, Sheetrock makes the building cool in summer, warm in winter, and cuts fuel bills.

You will also be glad to know that the cost of Sheetrock—for new construction, alterations and repairs—is actually less than that of frail, unsatisfactory wallboards. We suggest that you call on us today and see for yourself what a wonderful material this standard wall and ceiling unit really is.

THE PADDED HAMMER

An article appearing in the Palatine paper with the above heading, should interest a great many Antioch people. But a heading we would suggest is "Antioch's Loss is Palatine's Gain." The article follows:

The Padded Hammer
Palatine is quick to recognize a real bargain. Rev. S. E. Pollock may be a minister on Sunday, but he is a boy's man in every day life—and a great big bargain for Palatine. And Palatine knows it.

His work among the Boy Scouts, especially in the organization of the band, deserves the general recognition that it has received from members of all churches, and the citizens of Palatine, irrespective of church affiliation, are united in the belief that Rev. Pollock is doing great work among the boys.

More or less has been said in these columns from time to time about Palatine's Boy Scouts band and we all know that Rev. Pollock is a good band master and his unusual ability in teaching boys how to play band instruments. But these boys are learning other things than just band music. They are learning how to be manly boys. The Boy Scout work alone is elevating in morals and intellect, but Rev. Pollock helps the boys to have a good time in getting those morals and education.

Scoutmaster George Hermann and Assistant Rev. Pollock are doing a great work for Palatine's young men, and the recent expressed determination of many of the parents that the work should not be interrupted, if money can keep it going, shows that Palatine is determined to keep the bargain that she has in Rev. Pollock.

Scoutmaster Hermann said: "You know, as I have said in from play, that this is hard work, you know. When I think of the boys, I'll go out and get a little more."

The average American consumes, according to Government statistics, more than a barrel of flour every year.

Approximately 4½ bushels of wheat are required to make a barrel of flour.

The freight on this amount of wheat, when it is shipped to some distant mill and returned as flour and feed, averages from 90c to $1.10.

There are nearly ten thousand flour consumers within reach of our home mill and its flour.

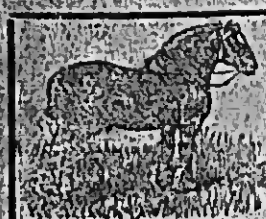

If every citizen of our community used home milled flour, we would be saving about $10,000 a year that is now wasted in unnecessary traffic expense.

Whether you bake your bread at home or buy it at the bakery, be sure it is made from Antioch Best Flour.

Actual chemical analysis and scientific baking tests prove that Antioch Best Flour is inferior to none and far superior to some for which our community is paying more money.

Farm Bureau News

C. E. WHEELLOCK of Libertyville, Ill.

Farm Bureau Enriching the Subsoil
The need for enriching the subsoils of most farms is recognized. Deep-rooting legumes offer the best means of accomplishing this purpose, provided the acidity in the surface and subsoil is properly corrected and an ample supply of bicarbonates is present. Alfalfa and sweet clover are best suited for enriching the deeper layers of the soil. In order to use them successfully, it is necessary to recognize the translocation of plant food from the tops to the roots and later from the roots to the tops, particularly in the case of the sweet clover. The first year, sweet clover sends its root system and develops tops until about the middle of June, after which the tops increase growth for a short time only. The roots continue to increase in volume and in composition while the tops suffer a decrease in composition in nitrogen, phosphorus and sulphur. Plowing sweet clover late in the fall will consequently leave large amounts of plant food in the sub-soil. Plowing in the spring in preparation for corn will also leave large amounts of plant food in the sub-soil. Results already obtained indicate that the roots begin extending before the appearance of new tops. Alfalfa possesses the advantage of always being deep-rooted and containing at all times large amounts of plant food in the sub-soil. It may be plowed at any time with the assurance that the sub-soil has been enriched in organic matter and probably in nitrogen. On many soils, it is advisable to start the sub-soil enrichment by the use of sweet clover, however, on soils already rich in the surface alfalfa may be used to advantage. The more resistant nature of the sweet clover to climatic and physical conditions makes its use more dependable in the initial stages of soil enrichment.—Whiting, Div. of Soil Biology, U. of I.

Township Exhibits For The Year
Samples of grain in the bundle, showing the length of straw, and shape of the heads of grain should be saved now during harvest time. Grain on the straw along with a peck sample of the grain after it is threshed will make one of the best features of the exhibit.
Anything by livestock or poultry may be entered. There is no entry fee and no individual prizes.
Exhibits will be shown by townships and prizes awarded by townships. The committee plan on offering cups for first, second and third premiums followed by ribbons.
This feature of the fair should not detract from the main agricultural exhibit but may add to it as many farm products not on the premium list will be shown in the township exhibit.
If every farmer will save just a few things from his farm as the season goes along this Farm Bureau project will be one of the most interesting exhibits at the fair.
Arrangement will be made to collect township exhibits in one place in the township and carry them from this assembly place to the fair. This will save each exhibitor making a special trip to Libertyville.

Want a Live Baby?

You can get one at the Majestic theatre on Friday night after the first showing of "Beyond the Rocks," starring Rudolph Valentino and Gloria Swanson—if you are lucky.
Most assuredly this is a live baby. It is two months old, has brown hair and eyes, cries every once in awhile and feeds from a bottle. That the infant can emit lusty shrieks, kicks at its crib and drinks milk, is surely evidence that it is a baby and alive. For various reasons the management does not reveal the baby's sex.
Anyway, any man or woman, above 20 years of age is qualified to win the youngster. They must be of good character, love children and be employed. That is all.

It is distinctly understood before the contest that the lucky winner of the live baby is in no way compelled to accept it. It is realized that certain men and women in Antioch already have families or have no desire to adopt a youngster.

The winner will be determined in this way, as each person buys a ticket to see "Beyond the Rocks" on Friday night they will be given a numbered coupon, the duplicate of which will be retained by the management. Immediately after the first show all of the numbers kept by the management will be placed in a basket. Then the fifth number drawn is the winner. In the event the first winner is not qualified to receive the baby or does not wish it, five more numbers will be drawn.

An important added feature is this—the baby is guaranteed to be in good health and has been examined by a reputable physician. Also, it is of good parentage.

AN ORDINANCE PROHIBITING THE USE OF PRIVIES ON PARCELS OF LAND IN THE VILLAGE OF ANTIOCH, ADJACENT TO OR ABUTTING UPON THE SANITARY SEWER IN SAID VILLAGE.

Be it ordained by the president and board of trustees of the village of Antioch, county of Lake and state of Illinois.

Section 1. The use of all privies on lots or parcels of land adjacent to or abutting upon the sanitary sewer in the village of Antioch, county of Lake and state of Illinois, shall be prohibited after the expiration of the period of six months after the date of publication of this ordinance, and no person shall use or permit to be used privy on any lot or parcel of land adjacent to or abutting upon such sanitary sewer after the expiration of the period of six months from the publication of this ordinance, and the use thereof thereafter shall constitute a nuisance and shall be removed and abated.

Section 2. No privy shall be constructed in the village of Antioch on any lot or parcel of land adjacent to or abutting upon the sanitary sewer from and after the publication of this ordinance.

Section 3. In case of violation of this ordinance the village may cause any such building used as aforesaid removed and charge the cost of removal together with the cost of abating the nuisance to the owner of the property or the person in possession thereof and sue such owner or the person in possession thereof in any court of appropriate jurisdiction.

Section 4. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be subject to a penalty of not less than five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars for each offense and each day shall constitute a separate and distinct offense, and the village may proceed against any such person by summons for the amount of such penalty or by warrant for the arrest of any such person, all in accordance with the water and sewer ordinance of the said village of Antioch.

Section 5. All ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

Section 6. This ordinance shall take effect and be in full force ten days after its passage, approval and publication.

Woman Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Makes This Offer

Cumberland, Md.—"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was between thirteen and fourteen years old and was going to school, because I suffered with pains and could not rest. I did not have any more trouble after that until I was married, then I always was troubled in my back while carrying a child and could not do my work until I took the Vegetable Compound. I am strong, do all my washing and ironing and all work for seven children and feel fine. I always have an easy time at childbirth and what it did for me it will do for other women. I am willing to answer any woman if she will write asking what it did for me."

—Mrs. JOHN HEIER, 63 Dille St., Cumberland, Md.

MRS. FRANK WILKIE, of Syracuse, N. Y., formerly matron at the State Reformatory at Industry, N. Y., who says she is delighted with Tanlac since it restored her health after she suffered eight years.

"This is the first time in eight years that I have been free from stomach trouble and it is all because of the wonderful good Tanlac has done me," said Mrs. Frank Wilkie, 220 Cedar St., Syracuse. Mrs. Wilkie formerly resided in Buffalo and for two years was matron of the State Reformatory at Industry, N. Y.

"I was eating scarcely enough to keep alive," she declared, "for I would rather not touch a bite than suffer the misery I knew would follow. Even sweet milk disagreed with me. I was sick in bed for two and three days at a time, and as my stomach made such awful pressure on my heart it almost cut off my breath. I had horrible dreams at night and in the morning was all tired out."

"Well, the longest day I live I will praise Tanlac, for my improvement has been simply remarkable. I have no more heartburn, my appetite is wonderful, I can eat most anything I want, and my sleep is sound and restful. I am thoroughly delighted with Tanlac. It is wonderful."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. —Advertisement.

U. S. APPOINTS FUEL DICTATORS

Sixty Operators Named to Carry Out Orders of Interstate Commerce Commission.

HOOVER'S PLAN ANNOUNCED

"Presidential Committee" is Composed of Hoover, Daugherty, Fall and McCord—Body to Have Charge of Coal Distribution.

Washington, July 26.—Here is what President Harding proposes to do in the coal and railroad strike emergency, as announced by Secretary of Commerce Hoover. The plan is predicated upon an opinion of Attorney General H. H. Daugherty authorizing wide legal powers to the government.

1. Appointment of a "presidential committee," made up of Secretary Hoover, Attorney General Daugherty, Secretary Fall of the Interior department and Chairman McCord of the interstate commerce committee. This committee will have general charge of all plans for distribution and regulation in every coal field.

2. Representatives of coal and rail operators to have delegations on the presidential committee.

3. Agents of President's committee in every coal field.

4. A committee of coal operators, or owners, in each district.

5. Co-operation in every way in carrying out orders for preferential movement of freights.

6. Careful check on movements of freight cars.

7. Operators to be allowed wide latitude at mines.

8. Cars to be allotted to only those mine owners who agree to fair price arrangements.

9. All operators agree to tentative maximum price fixed by Commerce department on June 1 ($3.50 per ton at mine).

The six members of the operators' committee, named by districts (a "drafting committee" it was called) were: S. E. Yerkes, Birmingham; B. B. White, Glenview, W. Va.; E. S. Mayan, Knoxville; Charles O'Neill, Altoona; S. Pemberton, Hattiesburg, Mississippi; and C. E. Backus, New York.

The drafting committee was a part of the general executive committee of the operators, appointed to co-operate with the government and the railways. Other members and districts appointed were:

Hazard district, E. L. Douglas, Cincinnati; Harlan county district, H. C. Dickson, Louisville; Kanawha district, C. V. Dickson, Huntington; Logan district, A. J. Kong, northeastern Kentucky; northern West Virginia, E. Drennan; western Kentucky, J. D. Patterson, Dayton, O.; Virginia operators' association, Webb Willets, Norton, Va.; Elk River district, A. G. Bradley, western Kentucky; C. F. Richardson, Paducah; Somerset county, Pennsylvania, P. Kendall, Washington; upper Potomac, T. A. Simmons, A. W. Stewart, John S. Brophy; Fayette county, Pennsylvania, George W. Hix.

The legal "O. K." was put upon the administration's plan to combat the twin strikes by Attorney General Daugherty. After studying the plan evolved by Secretary of Commerce Hoover the attorney general said it was within the law for the government to exercise such functions without further recourse to congress for new legislation.

"I shall join with Secretary Hoover and every other governmental agency under the direction of the President to relieve the situation to the end that coal and other necessities of life may be furnished in sufficient quantities and at reasonable prices," the attorney general said.

The first step will be to invoke that section of the transportation act giving the interstate commerce commission complete control over the distribution and use of all railway motive power, cars, terminals and other facilities necessary to the movement of traffic.

Hundreds of telegrams were sent out Sunday and replies received by the interstate commerce commission taking a census of the available railway equipment of the country and its present location. With this data experts of the commission will be enabled to ascertain where there is a surplus of serviceable equipment that can be transferred to sections where equipment is lacking to move traffic.

The individual railroads have been loath to let their equipment get off their own lines, because it takes three to four months to get it back under normal procedure. With the commission taking jurisdiction, however, equipment will be kept on the move.

DON'T OBSERVE 8-HOUR DAY
Law Is No Longer Popular With Workmen in Hamburg, Germany, Says Writer.

Keener competition is causing a decided swing away from many post-war pet ideas in Germany. Even the eight-hour law is no longer popular, Frederick Simplex writes in Our World. The labor inspection bureau in a recent report pictures the trouble in its enforcement is bringing as Hamburg's economic condition improved. Employers complain that laborers of both sexes, after an eight hour day, undertake to do outside work for other people—which cuts down their efficiency on their regular job. Workers, on the other hand, consider it an interference with their personal liberty if their employers try to hold them to the eight-hour plan. Although the law was passed to safeguard the health of the workers, they appear to have lost sight of its real intention, and the authorities show reluctance to prosecute cases of its violation. In the hotels and cafes, especially, it has been difficult to enforce the eight-hour day; writers are loath to give up their chances for more tips during overtime.

Boasting Pickwick.
Train Boy—Where on the map is Pickwick, Bill?
Brickman—Sounds as if it might be somewhere in the hinterland, kid. Why?

Train Boy—Some people are always trying to boost their native town. An old-fashioned hick asked me if I had the Pickwick papers.—Judge.

Some Are.

"And ours are putting them on."

GRAPE-NUTS is a regular "three bags full" of the best food qualities of whole wheat flour and malted barley, carefully mixed and slowly baked—

To develop all their appetizing flavor,
To preserve all their wholesomeness,
And to provide nature's "broom" that keeps the digestive system quick and span.

There's not a bit of artificial sweetening in Grape-Nuts—it just becomes sweet of its own accord in the long baking.

And that enticing flavor—how good it is with good milk or cream! Fruits, too, fresh or cooked, add to the delight of a dish of Grape-Nuts, morning, noon or sundown.

It is a compact, ready-to-eat food—no cooking needed. Why not try it for tomorrow's breakfast?

GETS CLOCK, BUT NOT "TIME"
Court Robbed of Imposing Timepiece Under Its Very Eyes and With Its Permission.

Thousands of law-breakers have been given "time" at Berlin's central criminal court in Munich, but recently an ingenious crook posing as a repair man actually was given the court's official clock and that while a case was being tried.

The sitting was well under way when a man in working clothes entered the courtroom with a long ladder which he calmly placed under the huge, imposing timepiece on the wall. The judge, counsel, accused and spectators were astonished as such an untoward interruption. The president stopped the workman's ascent of the ladder long enough to inquire the meaning of his conduct. The visitor explained that he merely wanted to get the clock for repair and that it would take only a moment. The president took only a moment. The president objected, but consented when the man said he already had called six times and always found the court in session.

The vacant space on the wall surprised the janitor later in the day, and his investigations revealed that the court had been robbed under its very eyes, in fact, with its permission.

Strong Persuasion.
"That was a fine editorial you had on 'Woman As a Power in Politics.'"

"Thanks," said the editor of the Chicago Tribune. "A delegation of lady voters called and ordered me to write it on the pain of their instant displeasure. After they'd gone I got to thinking about the way they went out, and I concluded that maybe they are a power in politics."

The wind frequently turns an umbrella, but a borrower seldom returns it.
